The Sun Never Sets on Sunrise; Stop Work Order Lifted, Appealed

by Elaine Skolnik

The Maryland Special Court of Appeals will be the setting for what could be the final chapter in the Sunrise Apartments saga. But don't hold your breath, folks. Plans for this longstanding controversial development have been dusted off, prepared for construction, then filed away for more years than this reporter cares to remember.

The denoument this time around will hinge on whether the Special Court of Appeals agrees with the Circuit Court's ruling to lift the Stop-work Order imposed by the county on May 1, 1990. If it does, the county could appeal further to the Maryland Court of Appeals; if the decision is reversed then Sunrise Limited Partnership has the option of appealing to the state's highest court. So, as they say folks, it isn't over "until the fat lady sings."

The saga of the Sunrise Apartments has spanned decades. Since the mid-1960s, the 9.9 acre tract has been zoned R-10 for high-density apartments of up to 48 units an acre. All zoning decisions are made by the county, which has exclusive authority in such matters. Because the Sunrise tract had already been subdivided before the adequate public facilities law took effect in 1970, the proposed development was "grandfathered" and could not be required to pass the adequate public facilities test for roads and sewer and water. Nor was the blessing of the Greenbelt city council required for the developer to start councils have kept a watchful eye on the tract even though the land was not annexed into the city until November 1984.

Problems

Despite the advantages the developers had going for them, the 46-unit Twin Tower apartment complex was unable to get off the ground. There were changes of ownership, problems of access, of financing and of low demand for rental apartments. Successive city councils were concerned about the disproportionate number of apartments already in the city, as well as the unfavorable impact on traffic in Greenbelt East. Later, in 1985, when access was gained to the property through the construction of Hanover Drive, there was movement by the developer to move ahead on building the apartment complex. The county executive had offered tax-exempt Industrial Development Bonds so that a more luxurious complex would be constructed. This brought an angry response from the Greenbelt City Council and led to work sessions with county executive representatives. These meetings on city-county relations resulted in a memorandum of understand-

Judge Rules Sunrise Has Rights to Highrise

by Elaine Skolnik

The Prince Georges County office of Law has appealed Circuit Court Judge Jacob S. Levin's July 9 ruling that lifted the stop-work order on the 467-unit Sunrise apartment complex in Greenbelt East. Judge Levin also ordered that the building permit be issued for a one-year period. Filed on August 8, the appeal will be heard in the Maryland Special Court of Appeals.

In his Circuit Court decision, Judge Levin reversed the County Board of Appeals rejection of the Sunrise Limited Partnership's argument that the developers had "vested rights" in the R-10 zoning (multi-family high density residential apartments with a maximum of 48 units per acre). Had Judge Levin agreed with the Board of Appeals, the 9.9 acre tract located at the end of Hanover Drive near Holiday Inn in Greenbelt East would have to be developed in the R-18C zoning category (multifamily medium-density condominium with a maximum of 12 units per acre). Sunrise developers had unsuccessfully fought the downzoning of the tract in the Langley Park/College Park/ Greenbelt Sectional Map Amend-

In their arguments before Judge Levin, county attorneys asserted: (1) the column footing poured was not an "indispensable part" of the apartment building, (2) it was poured out of the sequence established by the permit pursuant to which it was poured, (3) following its pouring, Sunrise developers did not consistently pursue construction of the building, and (4) the footing was not visible from the main road on which it was located

In his finding that the Board of Appeals erred in its interpretation of the commencement of construction of the "vested rights" test, Judge Levin ruled that the column footing is an "indispensable part" of the highrise apartment building. He said, "Here the column footing is a support for the portico of the main lobby which connects the main lobby which connects the two towers of the proposed apartment building, and the pouring of the footing for the column was followed by the pouring of footings for a retaining wall."

Judge Levin also found that "The column footing in this case, See JUDGE, page 9, col. 5

Beijing Restaurant Is Open

by Mary Lou Williamson

The Beijing restaurant is open in Roosevelt Center. The owners — the Liu family — have worked 'round the clock the past two days to get everything ready. County inspectors completed the approval process at noon on Wednesday.

Dennis Liu, president of the company and spokesman for the family was busily making decisions Wednesday afternoon. He consulted the Chinese calendar to find an auspicious day for the opening — either Tuesday or Friday, he discovered A check with the chef, his brother-in-law Craig Zhang, told him the kitchen could be ready by Friday. Dennis knew everything else was ready. He gave the order - order the food to be delivered on Thursday to the Beijing of Greenbelt, 131 Centerway. ". . . 20 lbs of snow peas, 1 case red peppers, 1 case green beans, 2 cases oranges . . ." The restaurant would open in two days.

Liu plans to serve a buffetstyle sample of his most popular menu items from the family's first Beijing restaurant in Laurel. This way "we can introduce diners to the kind of food we have," he said.

Liu will come to Greenbelt to manage the new restaurant and bring his brother-in-law as chief chef to ensure that the taste of the food and quality of the service will be exactly the same.

The 80-seat restaurant duplicates the one in Laurel with its upgraded decor in green and white. Future plans include placing a chef's wok in the window of what was for many years the barbershop, so passersby can watch.

The renovation of the empty store took much longer than Liu expected. He had planned to open in May. There were leaks in the building to be repaired and a new heating and air conditioning unit to install. "It's an old building and it's been empty for a long time," said Liu.

Liu Family

Liu's two sisters, Feng Liu Lee and Lilly Liu Zhang, would own the Greenbelt facility, but the entire family would continue to work both restaurants. Liu has enlarged the Laurel store three times in the three years it has been in operation.

Liu came to the United States from mainland China with his family when he was 16. They lived in Springhill Lake until four years ago. Liu attended Greenbelt Junior High School for two years, graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt in 1983 and the University of Maryland in 1988, receiving a degree in electrical engineering. His brotherin-law, who learned his trade in China and was the chef at a Chinese restaurant in the Greenbelt area, persuaded Liu to step aside from his career path to help open the family restaurant. Liu had spent his student years waiting tables in all the Greenbelt Chinese restaurants. He expected to devote six months or so to the new venture and then return to engineering. Now, he's not so sure. "I've gotten involved here," he said.

New signs on Greenbelt Road at Southway and on Kenilworth Avenue at Crescent Road aid visitors in finding Roosevelt center... — photo by J. Henson

Letters to the Editor

Cute, But No Shelter

On Friday, I drove past the new bus shelter at Crescent and Centerway. Four people were waiting for a bus, standing to one side of the bench, trying to avoid the light rain that was falling. Of course, the cute, undersized roof did little to protect them. They were lucky that the rainfall was light.

By the time I reached Greenbelt Road, the deluge had started. I could not help but think of those poor people, still waiting for the bus. They would certainly have appreciated a real bus shelter to protect them from the wind-driven rain, now falling in sheets.

I wondered if they would take the bus the next time it threatened rain: did they have a choice? I wondered if the designers of these cute little park benches cared whether or not people use public transportation. I'm sure the designers don't ride the bus, because they obviously do not understand the basic requirements for a bus shelter.

Somebody should tell them that it's more important to be able to escape from the wind and rain and, in winter, the cold than to have a cute little park bench with wood-shingle roof.

Ain't Broke

"If it ain't broke, don't fix

The two-year term for council is working well and has for many years; don't change it! If a person on council is working for the best interests of the community we'll be happy to reelect him/her. If a person on the council is not doing the job for which he was elected then two years is quite long enough to have him/her disrupting

As for the election . . . it would be much better if council members spent more time working on council business and less on campaigning and putting up signs all over town. Let their work speak for them and we'll vote for them.

Sank Our Roots

It is becoming tiresome to be constantly lectured by the late comers about preserving the values of Greenbelt, while these preachers were nowhere to be seen when we kept Greenbelt as pristine and green as it is, a magnet for the world for the past 50 years.

It is because of our dedication and unremitting efforts as the pioneers of this community that kept it as it was created.

We just dote on the mealymouthed protestations about allowing us seniors to set up a retirement community (at pense to the citizenry) any place except where we sank our roots decades ago.

Safety Hazard

I frequently walk to Roosevelt Center using the tunnel near the Mobil Service Station. For quite a few months I have noticed an open manhole in back of the station, near Domino Pizza. There is a wooden barrier covering this manhole. One day I noticed that the barrier had been moved a few feet away. I covered the manhole, but couldn't help but wonder what a safety hazard this open manhole is, with or without the barrier.

Whose responsibility is it to handle this safety hazard? The City? GHI? If neither one of these-who? I do hope this is looked into and taken care of before some unsuspecting person, man, woman or child, falls into this pit and is seriously injured.

Lolita Granahan

Former Greenbelter Lolita Wadman Granahan, 83, died August 3 at Washington Adventist Hospital after a brief illness. A well known artist, she was a resident of University Park.

Born in Minneapolis, Minnesota in 1908, she was a graduate of the Minneapolis School of Art. Upon graduation she was a winner of the Van Derlip Traveling Scholarship which enabled her to continue her studies in Europe.

With her late husband, David Granahan, also an artist, she established a studio at the Walker Art Gallery. There they worked on many major murals during the Roosevelt administration. She also illustrated many books, including a major biography of the composer Sibelius entitled "Finlandia."

Her illustrative work is in the Kerlan Collection of the University of Minnesota Foundation. Lolita Granahan's paintings were also widely recognized. In 1961 she was awarded a top prize by the Washington Society of Artists in a painting competition and her work hung in the National Gallery of Art.

The Granahans came to Greenbelt in 1942, residing in the new defense housing. She was active in many civic projects including the establishment of the Greenbelt Co-op Nursery School. As a fundraiser for the nursery school, Mrs. Granahan drew a map of Greenbelt. Because she had no map-making training, the project took her two months. (Later she learned map-making skills, and worked for a time for the government as a cartographer.) The map has been reprinted and is still in use today.

Mrs. Granahan also partici-pated in Greenbelt's 50th Anniversary Oral History Project.

In 1949 she moved to University Park. In 1989 she won a special award from Prince Georges County Beautification Committee for the design of her home and garden. She remained active in her field until the time of her death.

Her husband David Granahan. a former Greenbelt City Councilman, died earlier this year. She survived by sons David R. Bodega. California; Peter E., Bowie; James M., West River, Maryland; nine grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; and brother Elmer Wadman. Fort Dodge. Iowa.

Memorial contributions may be made to Washington Adventist Hospital, Takoma Park.

Kramer Catches 30 Inch Channel Catfish in Lake

by Betsy Likowski

A 30 inch long, 13 pound channel catfish was caught in Greenbelt Lake on Friday, August 2. Fisherman John Kramer let the fish go so that others can have a chance to catch

A channel catfish nine pounds and over is long enough to get an official citation, explained Kramer, and the channel catfish is different from the common catfish—it has a forked tail. They are usually two to four pounds.

Kramer comes to fish in Greenbelt Lake about once a week. He says this is the first sizable fish he has caught this year. His usual catch are blue gills. He's also caught largemouth bass, snapping turtles, and minnows. He fishes with two fishing rods, one with a line on the bottom, which is how he caught the big catfish.

Kramer is now a resident of Hollywood, but lived in Greenbelt from the early days until it became a housing co-op. He retired in 1969, which is when he started fishing in Greenbelt Lake during the warm weather. The fishing is no good when the weather turns cold, he says.

Through the years he has seen some changes in the fishing at Greenbelt Lake. For one thing, fewer people are fishing at the lake, and fewer fish are caught. The type of fish in the lake has changed, too. The gold fish used to be so plentiful for so long they were almost a nuisance, he said, but he doesn't catch any now. The gold fish would swim in such large schools that the water would be red with them. Some that he caught were 10 to 12 inches long and some were very fancy, so that passersby would ask for them.

He has not seen many channel catfish recently, either. He says they were originally stocked from fish stranded after Hurricane Agnes in Pennsylvania in 1972. He thinks most of the channel catfish went out of the lake when it was drained a couple of years ago.

Another change is that a fa-vorite bench to fish from near the boathouse was taken out and not replaced. A lot of the older men liked to fish from there, he said. There is a drop-off in the lake there, making it a good fishing spot.

The slippery catfish is hard to measure.

John Kramer shows off his catch — a 30 inch channel catfish. Kramer fishes weekly in Greenbelt Lake.

Kramer enjoys fishing at the lake. You "meet a lot of interesting folks," he said, and he likes to help the kids fish. Sometimes he lets the kids reel in what he has on the line. It is probably the first fish many of them have caught, he believes, and a lot of the boys become interested in fishing then.

Although the developer received tax-exempt revenue bor and indicated construction would begin, it did not happen. He later explained it had not been economically feasible to proceed because of tax code changes by Congress in the 1986 Tax Reform Bill.

Commercial Buildings?

In 1987 the developers explored with the city possibilities for constructing a commercial office complex on the site. Commercial projects, they said, would result in increased revenues while requiring fewer services than apartments.

While sympathetic to office development, both city council and the Advisory Planning Board said they considered the 610-000-square-foot proposed project too massive and too prominent on the Greenbelt skyline. After the developers pared down the complex to 450,000 square feet, council felt it was not enough and rejected the revised plan.

Lamenting that they had become weary of the whole process, the Sunrise developers in 1989 negotiated a contingency contract with Trammel Crowe Company. The national residential development firm proposed building a 470-unit mid-rise apartment complex comprised of six buildings.

More Opposition

The city council and Prince Georges Councilman Richard Castaldi were opposed to the new apartment complex which, they noted, had more density than the neighboring apartments. Trammell Crowe then pulled out. Frustrated that their latest proposal was not realized and concerned about the tract's status in the new master plan, Sunrise developers announced that they were moving ahead on constructing the original 467-unit Sunrise high-rise apartment complex.

The May 1990 Sectional Map Amendment of the master plan then downzoned the Sunrise tract, the county placed a stopwork order on any construction, the County Board of Appeals rejected the developers' contention that they had "vested rights" in the property's R-10 zoning, the Circuit Court reversed the County Board of Appeals and the hot potato is now in the Special Court of Appeals.

And so . . . the Sunrise saga continues.

JUDGE

(Continued from page one) regardless of whether it was visible from Hanover Road, constitutes commencement of construction." He noted that the site plan had been approved by the county and permits were issued.

Judge Levin observed, "None of the vested rights cases cited" by the county or Sunrise attorneys "expressly or impliedly requires that the work done be visible to the public eye to meet the commencement of construction prong. Rather the cases require work done be recognizable on inspection by a reasonable member of the public, as the commencement of construction. . ."

The Court did not address the issues of whether the footing was poured out of sequence or whether the Sunrise developers consistently pursued construction of the apartments.

In the Circuit Court, Russell W. Shipley argued the case for the Sunrise Development Limited Partnership and Albert J. Lochte for the county.
